Major Wake-up Call

(Republished from 2013)

I realized something with acute recognition this month. It's something that I've known for seemingly forever; life is short. I often think or say enjoy every moment because you never know when it might be your last. However, this month it became scarily, in my face, proven to me. Last week, I fell off the back of my pick-up truck while unloading it into a municipal trash truck. This was unbelievable in and of itself, but as I fell, I just missed smashing my head into the back of the trash truck. I walked away relatively unscathed...lots of bruises and some back pain, but alive and fully functional. What a blessing!

As I write this, I feel compelled to mention something of utter importance. As my body first hit the tail gate of the truck and then hit the black top below, I felt this amazing sensation. I didn't feel as though I hit with full impact. I don't know what it was, but I have had this sensation at one other time in my life when I was in a car accident that was very serious and I should've been injured, but again, didn't "feel" the full impact of the crash. This sensation was something unexplainable; call it an angel, physics, God, human adrenaline kicking in, some unknown power. I don't know, but it saved me from incredible injury.

OK, so right now, you're probably saying what the heck does this have to do with being organized?

Well, a lot!

1. I realized that being organized in my life saves me a ton of time. Time that I can spend with family, friends and doing things I love doing.
2. I realized that I am truly blessed to be doing something I love and to be passing on my organizing skills to others so that they can spend more time doing what they love with those they love.
3. I realized how important it is to have all of my important documents (health insurance, life insurance, tax information, my will, etc.) organized in such a way, that if I didn't walk away from that accident, that my family could go on a little easier without me by being able to access all of the information they needed in a relatively easy manner.

So, I apologize for putting something so personal in this month's newsletter, but I felt that I needed to share the incredible moment of truth that I experienced and I wanted to share it with the people that I feel so blessed to share it with. All of you.

Magically Organized is focused on you and your peace of mind. I work alongside you to make your life easier. I pride myself on providing high-quality, confidential service.

I work with you to eliminate the clutter. I can help you to finally get your car in the garage, sort through a closet, empty a basement, or anything in between. Together, we will work at a pace that is good for you. When we are finished, you will have an easier, more peaceful life.

I began Magically Organized to help to bring peace and solace to others. It is my intention and goal to help you get through the clutter so that you will have relaxation and comfort in your home again.

I believe that you can change someone's life by helping them to conquer a task that seems insurmountable. The sense of relief that you will feel when the job is complete is why I do this work. It is very rewarding!

I began this company because I have a natural talent for organizing and I want to pass it on. I love organizing and want to show you how it can make your life easier. I welcome the opportunity to earn your trust and deliver you the best service in the industry.
